

Dic mihi, Musa levis: cur tam gravis esse videris? Weighing Poetry in Horace Odes 3.30

1. Horace, Odes 3.30.10-16

Dicar, qua uiolens obstrepit Aufidus et qua pauper aquae Daunus agrestium regnauit populorum, ex humili potens princeps Aeolium carmen ad Italos deduxisse modos. Sume superbiam quaesitam meritis et mihi Delphica lauro cinge uolens, Melpomene, comam.

Where the raging Aufidus roars and where Daunus, lacking in water, ruled over rustic peoples, I, powerful from lowly birth, will be called the first to have brought down Aeolic song to Italian verses. Take up your well-earned pride, Melpomene, and with Delphic laurel willingly crown my hair.

2. Vergil, Georgics 3.10-15

Primus ego in patriam mecum, modo uita supersit, Aonio rediens deducam uertice Musas; primus Idumaea referam tibi, Mantua, palmas, et uiridi in campo templum de marmore ponam propter aquam, tardis ingens ubi flexibus errat Mincius et tenera praetexit harundine ripas.

I first, should life remain, returning to my country will lead down the Muses from the Aonian peak.
I first will bring back to you, Mantua, the Idumaean palms, and in the green field I will place a temple of marble beside the water, where the large Mincius wanders with slow turnings and cloaks its banks in tender reed.

3. Vergil, Eclogues 6.3-8

Cum canerem reges et proelia, Cynthius aurem uellit et admonuit: ‘pastorem, Tityre, pinguis pascere oportet ouis, deductum dicere carmen.’ nunc ego (namque super tibi erunt qui dicere laudes, Varo, tuas cupiant et tristia condere bella) agrestem tenui meditabor harundine Musam:

When I sang of kings and wars, the Cynthian one tugged my ear and warned: “A shepherd, Tityrus, should feed flocks fat, but sing a slender song.” Now I (for there will be others besides who want to sing your praises, Varus, and tell of mournful wars), with slender reed I’ll focus on my rustic Muse.

4. Callimachus, Aetia Prologue 21-24

*καὶ γὰρ ὅτε] επρ[ώ]τιστον ἐμοῦς ἐπὶ δέλτον ἔθηκα γούνασι] ν, Ά[πό]λλων εἰπεν ὁ μοι Λύκιος.
’.....]... ἀοιδέ, τὸ μὲν θύος ὅττι πάχιστον θρέψαι, τὴ] ν Μοῦσαν δ’ ὡγαθὲ λεπταλέην.*

For when I first put tablet to my knees, Lycian Apollo spoke this to me:
“Feed your sacrifice fat as can be,
good singer, but keep your Muse lean.”

5. Callimachus, Aetia Prologue 8-12

*.....] τήκ[ειν] ἥπαρ ἐπιστάμενον,
.....].. ρεηγ [όλ]ιγόστιχος ἀλλὰ καθέλ[κει
... πο]λὺ τὴν μακρὸν ὄμπνια Θεσμοφόρο[ς]. τοῖν δὲ] δυοῖν Μίμνερμος ὅτι γλυκύς, α[ἱ κατὰ λεπτόν
.....] ἡ μεγάλη δ’ οὐκ ἐδίδαξε γυνή.*

... knowing how to consume the liver,
... of few verses, but bountiful Demeter
... far outweighs the tall (woman?), and of the two it was the (slender verses?) that taught that Mimnermus was sweet, not his great lady.

6. Horace, Odes 3.1.41-48

Quod si dolentem nec Phrygius lapis nec purpurarum sidere clarior delenit usus nec Falerna uitis Achaemeniumque costum,

*cur inuidendis postibus et nouo sublime ritu moliar atrium?
Cur ualle permutem Sabina diuitias operosiores?*

But if neither Phrygian stone, nor the use of purple brighter than the sun, nor Falernian wine or Persian perfume soothe a man in grief,

Why would I hoist a lofty hall with a modish look and posts that draw ire?
Why would I trade my Sabine valley for toil-compounding wealth?

7. Ovid, Metamorphoses 15.871-79

*Iamque opus exegi, quod nec Iouis ira nec ignis nec poterit ferrum nec edax abolere uetustas.
cum uolet, illa dies, quae nil nisi corporis huius ius habet, incerti spatium mihi finiat aeui:
parte tamen meliore mei super alta perennis astra ferar, nomenque erit indelebile nostrum, quaque patet domitis Romana potentia terris, ore legar populi, perque omnia saecula fama, siquid habent ueri uatum praesagia, uiuam.*

And now I've finished a work which neither Jove's anger nor fire nor steel nor gnawing age will be able to ruin.
When it wants, let that day end the space of my uncertain life (it has the right to take my flesh, but nothing more).
Even so will I be carried above the high stars, eternal, in my better part, and my name will be indelible, and where Roman power stretches over conquered lands, I will be on the people's lips, and through all generations, if predictions of bards have any merit, in fame I'll live.

8. Horace, Odes 2.20.13-20

Iam Daedaleo notior Icaro uisam gementis litora Bosphori Syrtisque Gaetulas canorus ales Hyperboeosque campos.

Me Colchus et qui dissimulat metum Marsae cohortis Dacus et ultimi noscent Geloni, me peritus discret Hiber Rhodanique potor.

Now, more famous than Daedalian Icarus
I will visit the Bosphorus' groaning shores and Gaetulian Syrtes and Hyperborean fields as a songful bird.

The Colchian will know me, the Dacian too, who hides his fear of Latin troops, and the farthest Geloni; the learned Spaniard will learn of me, as will he who drinks from the Rhone.
