

High School Teaching, A Vocation for Classics Ph.Ds

It is common enough for high school teachers to transition into university positions. Less common is for university teachers to transition to teaching high school. After a 10+ year career teaching at university, I transitioned to teaching high school Latin in the Chicago area and serving on a school board.

I will discuss some of the barriers those who wish to make this change may experience (both legal and prejudicial), as well as the benefits and trade-offs to this post-Ph.D. career.
