

What's a Seal of Biliteracy and What Does It Have to Do with Me?

A Seal of Biliteracy is a high-school graduation endorsement that rewards students who have met specific benchmarks in both English and another language. States, districts, and individual schools have developed policies for awarding the Seal, and those policies vary widely. Many—but not all—include Latin and even Greek, and many—but not all—reflect best practices in their requirements.

This panel will hear from teachers and administrators about the history of the Seal and about classroom decisions that make it possible for students to earn it.
