

A Reader's Response: Perspectives and a Roadmap

Over the years I have served as reviewer of many applications for grants, both internally at my home institutions, and nationally and internationally. I have learned from these experiences various criteria for creating a successful grant application. Irregardless of the level of grant, the reasons for failure remain fairly common, while the core principles of a successful grant application remain the same. In my presentation I will outline what I see as the main guidelines to follow when writing a grant application; that is, I will provide a “roadmap” for (hopefully) success.