

Classics and Online/Distance Learning: The Future of Classics in the Post-Covid Classroom

This roundtable offers colleagues an opportunity to share productive strategies and techniques for teaching distance learning/hybrid/online Classical Civilization and Language courses at both the graduate and undergraduate levels. How can instructors adapt their pedagogies and create a sense of community now that hybrid/online classrooms and asynchronous learning have become more widespread? The first organizer plans to begin with discussion of “How can the undergraduate Latin classroom be adapted to reach a hybrid/online audience?” and will also encourage attendees to share their best practices for the COVID classroom. The second organizer will begin with some structured discussion on how we are using live, online resources to reach potential students and retain current students, for both distance and in-person graduate programs, but will encourage attendees to raise other issues for conversation as well.
